HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 13, 1997

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, it is the people who work in local government who make things happen. They deal with the needs of our constituents on a face-to-face basis, each and every day. They are required to deal with difficult problems at work, and because they are so accessible around the community, they often deal with them at times when they are away from the office. Huron County is about to lose a most capable official when Helen Lemanski, the county clerk, retires from her post as county clerk on December 20.

Helen has worked for Huron County for 44 years, having been county clerk for the past 17 years. In fact, Helen's attention to detail and performance have been so daunting that she has been unopposed in her campaign for county clerk in four out of five of her elections.

Helen Lemanski was responsible for computerization of the country's records. The official records of births, deaths, voter registration, the circuit court, and all other public records important to the community were maintained by her, and greatly facilitated by her computerization efforts. If any resident of the county needs official information, they can easily get it because of her.

And, of course, it is also easier to get information because of the type of person that Helen Lemanski has been. No one ever goes without assistance. She always works to be sure that a resident gets the help they need. She assists local township clerks in performing their responsibilities to be sure that there is effective cooperation between township and county offices. The people of Huron County have been fortunate to have had the assistance of Helen and the fine support staff she has trained and nurtured.

Her work for the county has been exemplary, particularly in her record of attendance. Very rarely does Helen ever miss a day of work. And when she does, it is either because she is unquestionably ill, or because she is spending time with her daughter Bobbi, who has returned home for a visit. This woman is truly a model for both a good official, and a good mother.

Mr. Speaker, this institutional memory will surely be missed in the halls of Huron County government. I urge you and all of our colleagues to join me in wishing Helen, and her husband Bob, the very best in her retirement, and good fortune in all that life still holds for her.

FAST TRACK

HON. ALLEN BOYD

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 13, 1997

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, today's vote is about the direction we want our economy to take, and there are three crucial issues which must be addressed if future trade agreements are going to be good for America. One, we must ensure our sovereignty is protected. Two, there must be a level playing field for American workers, and three, the promises made to garner support for trade agreements must be kept.

As we enter the global market place, it is important that Congress ensures our sovereignty is protected. Since the World Trade Organization was created, over 20 U.S. laws have been challenged or are currently being challenged. Congress has already changed one law to avoid facing the massive tariffs the WTO can implement when they ruled a U.S. law was actually a barrier to trade. In my home State of Florida, we require foreign agricultural producers to ship crops into our State to pay for inspections when their produce enters our ports. These inspections protect locally grown crops from exposure to foreign-based infestations which could devastate a multibillion dollar agriculture industry. While this State law does not violate any Federal statute, it is being challenged in the WTO.

In addition, this bill does not address the issue of the emerging global labor market. As we move toward the global economy, where our workers will compete with workers from every country in the world, it is important that we address this crucial issue. Given a level playing field, American workers are the most productive in the world and they can compete with any other country's work force. However, the fast track bill we are being asked to vote on today would force Americans to compete against people earning less than a dollar an hour and work 12 hour days. In many cases, our workers are being asked to compete with child and forced labor earning slave wages.

It is important for Americans that trade agreements ensure a level playing field is cultivated by bringing foreign wages and worker safety provisions up to ours, not by allowing our standards to fall to theirs. The fast track bill we are voting on jeopardizes American wage and safety standards.

Finally, I have serious reservations about the promises being made to try and force this agreement through Congress. While I was not in Congress when NAFTA was debated and voted on, I am well aware of the host of promises made to Florida agriculture growers to enlist their support. In reviewing those promises, I am sorry to say that vast majority of them were not kept.

In 1993, the administration made specific promises to assist agriculture producers in my State. Today, we have half as many tomato growers as there were in 1992 and the industry has lost $500 million because Mexican tomatoes were dumped in the United States. Our citrus growers have not fared any better. They have not exported one orange to Mexico since NAFTA became law.

In the last few days, the promises have started to flow again and I have some advice for my colleagues. Listen to the people of Florida who have paid the price for believing the promises in the past. Today, every major agricultural group in Florida opposes this agreement. In short, fool me once, shame on you. Fool me twice, shame on me.

In all three cases, this fast track bill fails hardworking American families. I am a supporter of free trade, but not at the price of American jobs. I urge my colleagues to vote no on fast track and let's get a trade bill which respects American sovereignty, farmers, and workers.

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 13, 1997

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is unclear whether the House will vote on H.R. 2621, the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act, this session. I want to reiterate my strong support for the passage of this legislation to permit the negotiation of trade agreements that would then be brought back to the Congress for approval or disapproval.

Some of my colleagues have said that granting this negotiating authority to the U.S. Trade Representative will inevitably lead to a loss of American jobs. This argument is not supported by the facts. In fact, trade agreements to open foreign markets will lead to more and better jobs and help sustain a strong economy.

Obviously, the degree to which any bilateral or multilateral trade agreement affects American jobs will depend on the type of agreement reached and on many external economic factors, such as productivity. But to assert that trade agreements that might be negotiated under this authority will lead to fewer American jobs just doesn't hold up. Since 1993, more than a third of our economic growth has directly come from exports, and the number of export-related jobs has increased by 1.7 million. We have to remember that last year the United States created more new jobs than the other major industrial countries combined. And, jobs related to international trade on average pay 15 percent more than non-trade-related jobs.

My own State, Ohio, is the eighth largest exporter in the country with exports totaling $25 billion in 1996. The products exported from our State, including industrial machinery, cars, electronic equipment, plastic, and agricultural equipment, support many of our high-skilled, high-paying jobs at home. Ohio is the 12th largest agriculture exporting State, shipping $1.6 billion in agricultural exports in 1996. In the Cincinnati region alone, we exported $4.8 billion of merchandise over the last year. By adopting fast track, we will be able to sustain growth by further leveling the playing field and opening new markets to American products.

Mr. Speaker, opening foreign markets through bilateral or multilateral agreements is vital to maintaining a strong economy. Europe, China, Japan, and others are forging preferential commercial alliances with emerging markets, which puts American exports at a disadvantage. These trade alliances also play a vital role in defining strategic relationships between countries and regions. The alternative is to paralyze the ability of the United
